Short Course At Olds Agriculture School

FREEDOM. — The Misses Alva Donnelly and Lena Hauch made a flying trip to Olds last week to attend the Foods and Clothing Judging competition held there on Thursday and Friday. Miss Edith Armstrong, the new home econonomist of this district and a 1949 Ford were their means of transportation and from all reports the girls had a lovely time.

It wasn't all work they did, not by any means, although what they did was strenuous, like for instance giving a demonstration on measuring or giving reasons why when making out a menu they chose roast beef and gravy for dinner instead of liverwurst, etc. That was tough, we're telling you.

However the weiner roast and sing-song held Thursday evening followed by a dance that night, dispelled any of the aches acquired during the day sessions. Did we tell you that the Boys' Beef, Dairy and Grain Clubs were there, too? Which of course made it more exciting! There's nothing like making faces at each other and trying to eat turnips the same time.

On Friday night the boys and girls were granted permission to leave the school grounds and go to the show in town. Our girls, having seen the show already, stayed in and along with six other girls had a party in one of the recreation rooms.

The party consisted of salad sandwiches, ice cream chocolates, pop and a lot of giggling especially when (all being attired in their respective housecoats) they saw a man coming down the corridor and had to turn out the lights because the room had glass doors.

All kidding aside the two days at the Olds School of Agriculture were educational as well as entertaining and Alva and Lena (tied winners at this year's Achievement Day) are grateful for the opportunity they had of attending such an interesting event.

KIKINO NEWS

KIKINO.—Mrs. Helen G. Callion who has been postmistress for Kikino for the past two years, is quitting this month. Mr. Albert Bellerose is to take over. We wish him the very best of luck.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Beauregard of Kikino, on Saturday, Oct. 1, a son.

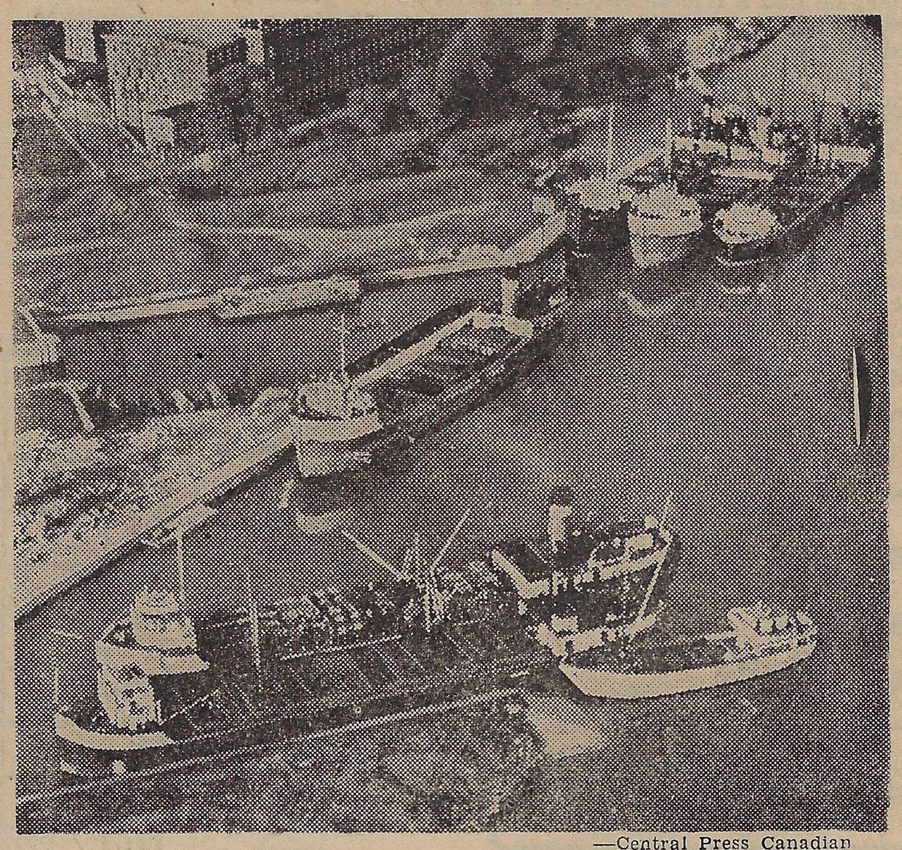

Mrs. Innes Gairdner is leaving on Wednesday for the city to visit her sister for awhile.

Mr. Donald Thompson of Bayne Lake is up visiting his parents for a few days and he had tough luck, one of his horses died this morning.

Some of the boys are returning home after being out harvesting this fall.

It looks as though winter is starting to draw near as the nights are sure cold.

LITTLE STONE STALLS COMMERCE

—Central Press Canadian

Stone thrown up by a ship's propeller is believed cause of more than 24-hour tie-up of traffic through the canal at Cornwall, Ont. This air photo shows ships immobilized in the canal. More than 35 other vessels were anchored in the St. Lawrence river. The stone damaged the massive gates on Lock 15. New gates were installed.

Canada's Forest Reserve Limited

Canada is dissipating her forest resources, according to John Coats, lecturer for the Canadian Forestry Association, who is now on tour of Alberta.

A native of Winnipeg, and a graduate this year from the University of Manitoba. Mr. Coats has come to Alberta at the request of the provincial government to conduct an educational series on forest conservation.

"We are living in a world of the past where forest resources are concerned. We have no unlimited reserve," Mr. Coats said in an interview with a representative of Community Publications.

At present he is in McMurray and Waterways lecturing and showing motion pictures.

The association he represents is now half a century old. R. D. Purdy, Calgary, is the provincial chairman.

FREEDOM NEWS

FREEDOM.—The Barrhead-Assiniboine highway is getting its first coat of gravel. The stone crushing crew up at Holmes Crossing reported some of the hardest rock crushable up there.

Screen your open grates in the winter, swat the fly in the summer, stop, look and listen at railway crossings, don't start kitchen fires with the coal oil can, keep your nose out of other people's business and maybe you'll live to be run over by a drunken "joy rider."

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Enders are the proud parents of another baby girl. Congratulations.

PUBLICITY

A fact which is not well known is that Russell Patterson, the illustrator, is a Canadian.

His parents lived in Ottawa. In fact, the last time I saw Russell was when his father died and he came to Ottawa for the funeral.

FANTASTIC SCHEME

Patterson and I cooked up about as fantastic a scheme as any screwball public relations man in the U.S.A. has put over. I still think it might have worked if one of the principals in the drama had not been inconsiderate enough to get arrested for embezzlement.

At that time Patterson was doing considerable stage designing; he had an interest in a Broadway show; he had a friend who had the agency for a passenger aircraft; and he was seeking some name to describe the ,modern girl which would capture the public fancy as "flapper" had. All these combined to make the plot, which was this:

Gladys Glad (subsequently the wife of the late Mark Hellinger) was to "disappear". Actually she was to be flown to Ottawa. As she was a member of the cast of Patterson's show, he thought he could get her to co-operate, as she was a good sport and liked a bit of publicity to boot.

The name of the new girl was to be "the glad girl," typifying The Glad Age. It was also to be the name of the aircraft.

This would publicize Patterson, his show, his friend's aircraft agency, and would give me several good stories. Not forgetting the gorgeous Miss Glad, of course, who was not adverse to headlines.

Unfortunately the aviator had found playing around with aeroplanes a bit expensive, and used government money to pay the bills. That ended the episode.

Patterson, one of the handsomest men I have ever seen, has dropped out of the public eye considerably since he allowed his correspondence school of illustrating to peter out. His reason, he told me, was that some of his students could draw better than he could, and he found their competition becoming progressively more embarrassing!

HORMONE AND CANCER

This man's name I don't even remember. At the time he was the head of the Curie Institute, Paris. And after I had asked him a particular question, he was the most indignantly-angry man I have ever interviewed.

The story really started when the Brookings Institute developed the plant hormone. A Dr. Manske of the Canadian National Research Council had contributed heavily in the chemical research.

Remembering H. G. Wells' "Food of the Gods," in which a substance was developed which permitted unlimited growth, leading to a superman, and learning of the phenominal growth which plant hormones stimulated, I questioned Dr. Manske about possibilities of the human hormone.

He said the human hormone had been synthetically prepared but when injected into humans it usually created cancer or gallstones.

This raised the question in my layman's mind whether it was possible that hodmones IN the body sible that hormones IN the body for cancer. (Neither the reasoning nor the theory were quite as simple as that, but it will do for the purpose of explanation).

The Curie Institute had been conducting extensive experiments on the effect of radium on cancer and when I asked my Paris doctor friend the influence of the hormone on cancer he accused me of breaking into his room and wanted to call the hotel manager to have me arrested!

He was the only person in the world who knew the effect of hormones on cancer; so I must have looked at his papers.

Gradually I got him cooled off and the story came out.

He had been invited to give an address before a joint meeting of the American and Canadian Medical Associations, and the whole subject was a carefully guarded secret until his paper was delivered. After I told him, in detail, how I began thinking along those lines independently, he was mollified to the extent of at least allowing me to depart a free man.

ANTICLIMAX

Naturally I looked forward to his paper with considerable interest. It was rather anticlimatical. After going through a manuscript unusually replete with technical terms, even for a scientist, and a number of times giving up hope of understanding it, I finally came to the conclusion that he was willing to pass a finger of suspicion at the female hormone but had to give the male hormone a clean bill of health. (Men have female as well as male hormones and women, male as well as female).

Considerable more experiment, he said, would have to be carried out before definite conclusions could be reached.

I understand that just recently research has turned its attention once again to the influence of the hormone as a cause of cancer.

Farm Gives Advice On Wintering Bees

Beekeepers may over - winter their strong colonies of bees either outside or in a cellar, reports the Dominion Experimental Farm at Brandon, Manitoba. Some kind of protection, besides a shelterbelt of trees or slatted fence, is generally given to bees when they are wintered out-of-doors. The colonies —packed singly, in pairs or in groups of four—may be wrapped with tar paper alone. Tentest and tar paper, or placed on specially constructed cases having approximately eight inches of insulating material between the hive and the outer case. The insulating material may consist of cut straw, dry leaves, sawdustor planer shavings.

Honeybees may be stored in specially constructed bee-cellars, in dug-outs, or in home basements—depending upon the number of colonies involved. Both methods of wintering honeybees require the knowledge of several well established principles. The principles involved have been published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture and may be secured free of charge by writing the nearest Dominion Experimental Farm or Station.

All fishermen and hunters are cautioned by Red Cross Water Safety Instructors to keep their boots unlaced when in boats or canoes so that in the case of emergency they may be quickly removed.

Delicious Dessert

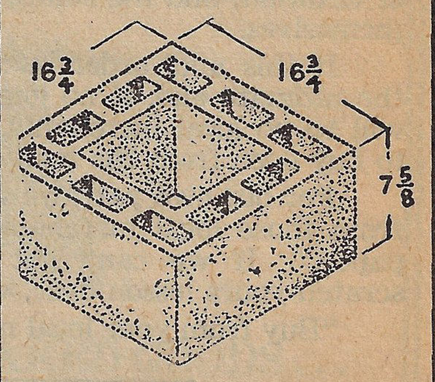

Ever try a grape chiffon pie? It even sounds good. It's one of the new ideas out of the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture. Others include home-made grape juice and grape pie, or a basis for whips, roly-polys, frozen desserts or a sauce for serving on brancmange or other light desserts.

Then there's always the old stand-by; grape jam, then which no home-maker has discovered a better way to preserve luscious Canadian grapes, unless it be grape jelly.

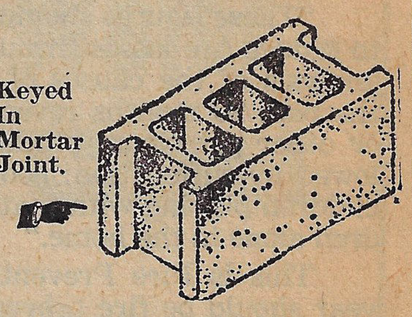

Apparently the dry summer did little to reduce Canada's grape crop and there should be plenty of grapes on the markets and store shelves this fall, reports the Department's home economists.

MAIL ORDERS MENACE SMALL TOWNS

Merchants in Alberta small towns increasingly are being challenged by a menace they do not know how to combat: inroads being made into their business by mail order houses.

Reasonably, local businessmen point out they pay taxes and salaries to their employees for support of the community. Mail order houses have no interest in the community except as a trading area, and contribute nothing of benefit, financially or otherwise, except the goods they sell.

Is there not some way, these merchants ask of making the mail order houses pay taxes to communities where they do business?

Well, from the little we know about it, the tax would be difficult to implement. At the moment we haven't time nor wit to think out a system.

But there is another way, probably just as difficult to make effective, and that is to persuade local buyers to patronize local industry. Human nature being what it is, people will purchase where they can buy cheapest. But it does seem to us that the mail order houses do have an unfair advantage in competition, not only because they are large concerns and may merchandize cheaper through bulk buying and may take small returns on large volume, but also because they may extend their trading area to many localities without the expense of overhead nor taxes.

The Post Office probably can't do anything about it; the municipalities would have difficulty finding a feasible method of taxation; and the solution is probably with local customers themselves.

If this mail order business is to be followed through to the ultimate end, if no one buys from local merchants there will be no local merchants, no salaries—no town and nobody to buy even from the mail order houses.

For our own part, we would like to hammer home: "Buy from those local merchants who patronize your local newspaper." If we can't get that you-scratch-my-back-and-I'll scratch-yours lesson over, we would settle for:

"Buy from your local merchant. In the long run it pays."

CUT DOWN THIS APPALLING WASTE

Controlled fire has been a benefactor of man. It has provided him with light and heat; by it he cooked his good. But fire can also be an enemy.

During the 10-year period ended December 31, 1948, there were 18,228 serious fires in the province of Alberta. These fires caused a loss which reached the staggering total of $19,927,648.

In those 10 years, 315 men, women and children died in Alberta as a result of fire.

This appalling situation is not improving, for in 1948 alone there were 2,285 fires which caused a property loss of over three and three-quarter millions of dollars, and brought death to 48 men, women and children . . . all in the province of Alberta.

In the words of E. R. Hughes, Alberta Fire Commissioner: "These figures should spur us on to make an all-out effort to reduce fire losses through proper care in handling fire. An analysis of the causes of fires and resulting loss of life over the past 20 months reveals that lighting stoves with gasoline or other petroleum products lead all the rest. This was followed by suffocation; people trapped in burning buildings; by children playing with matches; by the practice of leaving children alone in the home."

This is Fire Prevention Week. But every week of the year should be fire prevention inspired. Fires, like accidents, don't just happen, they are caused. It is estimated that 80 per cent are the result of carelessness.

While it is the fireman's business to put out fires, we all share responsibility in trying to eliminate conditions which cause them.

Everyone Has Something to Save For

A good many millions of words have been written in the past about the virtues of thrift and saving generally. Some of them have been extremely persuasive and occasionally the writer has developed his theme with a freshness and vigor calculted to fire the dullest imagination.

But there is another aspect to the question that is so obvious it may well be unappreciated if not overlooked entirely. It is the thought that civilization today would know practically none of the amenities it now takes for granted unless someone, somewhere had first saved some money.

Canada Savings Bonds are an outstanding example of what has been done to make it easier to save. This year a Fourth Series of these bonds is being offered to the public. To date, Canadians have made more than three million purchases of Canada Savings Bonds, representing a total value of more than a billion dollars. This year, as in the past, hundreds of thousands of us will again testify to their convenience and to the soundness of the investment they represent.

Dear Editor

Hutterites

Rockyford, Alta.

Dear Editor:

I don't see what was wrong about Mr. Pue's Hutterite story. He didn't write anything that was not true. Why don't those people try to get more education? If they did they'd leave the colonies. This is Canada—1949; not Germany in the dark ages.

DISGUSTED.

Beiseker, Alta.

Dear Editor:

The Hutterites are good living people and you shouldn't make a joke of them. They aren't educated but they don't do things like rolling weiners around on the streets like the educated college girls do, nor wear dunce caps.

FAIR PLAY.

High Level Bridge

Edmonton.

Dear Editor:

A solution to the problem of the high level bridge, that wouldn't cost nearly as much money, has occurred to me and I would like to use the columns of the Sun to put it across.

Instead of ripping up the lower deck and putting all the traffic on the top deck (spending thereby thousands on extended decks) why not keep the lower deck for southbound traffic and the upper deck for northbound traffic?

The C.P.R. tracks could be relaid on the east side of the top deck (where the southbound street car tracks now run) and that would leave a two-lane highway on the middle and west portions of the bridge.

Electric buses, of course, would use these roadways same as ordinary traffic.

This plan would undoubtedly cost a lot less than $1,000,000 and the east side of the structure could be reinforced with extra supports for weight of the trains.

NOT AN ENGINEER.

Editor's Note: Commissioner Menzies tells us the main reason is to obtain faster traffic. Two, 2-lane highways are not nearly as effective as one 4-lane because the 4-lane permits fast to pass slow traffic in the same direction.

From London, the Associated Press reports that police investigating two men who were acting strangely found that each was a night watchman who had become suspicious of one another and were cautiously keeping an eye from either end of the alley on the other's actions. The parallel, and moral, as applied to the Western Nations and the Iron Curtain countries is too obvious to be emphasized.

The atomic explosion in Russia has made the Nipponese uncomfortably aware that in an atomic war they are very vulnerable. They also probably have too unpleasant memories of Hiroshima to wish any threat to peace at the moment. Quite a difference from the time when Japan thought she was the warlord of Asia.

More On Hutterites--- Less On Pop, Please!

Rockyford Alta.

Dear Boss:

By this time you are probably tired of reading letters protesting against the views you expressed about the Hutterites. Personally, I thought your article tried to present a balanced opinion rather than be purely critical.

That those who know the Hutterites best should protest so vehemently speaks well of them as neighbors.

Since I've been in this vicinity I've heard a whole succession of stories about their kindness and good deeds.

During the depression they sent whole wagon loads of food, some of the recipients of which later signed a petition that the Hutterites be prevented from buying land. For a farmer who was unable to work because of a sore hand, they did his entire harvesting . . . These are only some of stories.

L. H. Jenkins

The Hutterite Exclusion Bill was sponsored by persons who possibly had good reasons of their own, but to me it has always seemed a discriminatory bit of legislation, entirely inappropriate for a country which prides itself on love of freedom and tolerance. I have my doubts whether the courts would uphold it.

I know too little about the Hutterites to comment on them intelligently. But one thing I may say with certainty after listening to comments of others for the past few days, they are not without friends in their adopted country.

Our readers agree with us in one particular, at any rate. In many localities we are not getting enough local news. Even local editors, who are falling down in this respect, would also agree. They complain that people in the community will not co-operate in providing them with news.

Oddest part of this situation is that those who complain the most invariably co-operate the least. Now when someone says the paper hasn't enough local news I ask if they have ever given news to the local editor.

That seems to put things in a different light. Why, I don't know. I sometimes wonder how they think news gets in a paper.

Possibly in future we should only hire mind-readers as local editors?

In many cases persons hesitate to provide news for fear someone may think they are publicity-seekers. Nothing could be further from the thoughts of those most intimately connected with the newspaper, not so much because those persons are more newsworthy as the fact the correspondent—often without realizing it—moves in the same small circle or depends on certain persons only for news.

I wish there was some easy way of persuading people that by providing news they make it more interesting for readers, and so help not only the newspaper but also subscribers and advertisers.

* * *

Some day soon I should like to write a blast on "peace-time profiteers." I'm getting tired of paying five, six, seven or ten cents for soft drinks, and never knowing which it is going to be.

When the tax came off soft drinks I thought the nuisance of paying seven cents for soft drinks would disappear. Maybe the storekeeper can see some justification for charging extra for a commodity which is supposed to be a standard price. I can't.

A restaurant could claim that it is charging more for coffee because its coffee is better—even though that is not true in practice. Yet the same argument does NOT apply to soft drinks.

Then this business of charging for drinks extra to the meal price, five cents, seven cents or ten cents, instead of including the drink in the stated price of the meal, seems to me a minor racket. If the average person is like myself, he never really knows how much a meal is costing him (in spite of the price on the menu) until he gets the bill.

Public indignation could easily be worked up about war profiteers. Peace profiteers are preying on the same human gullibility. They know the people have the money and will not protest too much.

"Charge everything the traffic will bear" may be sound business practice when times are good. As a customer it makes me see red. I would start a boycott of any establishment charging more than five cents for drinks if I thought it would do any good.

Which it probably won't.

If by fortuitous fate someone reads this and feels the same way I do, I would welcome some moral support in my one-man campaign for the "five cent cup."

Better still, some practical ideas of what to do about it.

Sincerely,
Your Editor.

Lack of Support Kills Weeklies

A weekly newspaper is possible only when it secures sufficient advertising support to pay expenses, and perhaps a modest profit. Merchants who want their towns to have a weekly paper will give the publisher regular support.

Two Saskatchewan weekly newspapers ceased publication during August and a third gave advance notice that it will withdraw from the field at the end of the year. The Guernsey Standard wrote "30" to its 40-year career on Aug 5; the Cabri Enterprise threw in the towel on Aug. 24; and the Punnichy Times will be discontinued on Dec. 28, after publishing for four generations.

In making the announcements, all three publishers gave the same reasons: inadequate advertising support, lack of experienced printers and high wages. And this has led other publishers to the opinion that, unless they got more local advertising support, there is every possibility that more papers — particularly the smaller ones — will be forced to the wall.

School Patrol Organized

SMOKY LAKE. — The A.M.A. have for the second term organized a school patrol among the students of the H. A. Kostash school. Corporal Cumming officiated the opening of the safety patrol for the term beginning Sept. 3.

In view of the fact that highway accidents are a daily occurrance, this is a step in the right direction as the young students who are the citizens of tomorrow, are taught the traffic regulations, safety precautions and courtesy while driving.

They are being prepared to become more careful and conscientious drivers, thus reducing the number of highway accidents which are much too prevalent at the present time.

These Autumn Days

To the farmer, the perfect day is the autumn day that comes with Indian summer. His granaries are full, his animals fat, and the shelves of his cellar are full of good things to eat. The promise of the year has been fulfilled, and nature takes a last bow in a perfect setting of sunshine and painted colors.

So Much To Do. With the crop safely harvested, the long hours of heavy toil have ended for many, and yet, much remains to be done and there seems to be so little time to do it. With the first cold rains of fall there is the sound of hammer and saw as sagging doors are made secure and the siding on the pig pen is made tight against the snows. The manure pile behind the barn is hauled and spread on next year's fallow field. The potatoes and root vegetables are dug and stored, for killing frosts are in the offing. The harvest machinery is greased and painted and placed under cover. The Agricultural Representative calls to teach new methods of culling the farm flock of its loafers and aged hens. Soon the hogs and cattle will be brought in, and a routine of winter feeding started.

Then, one evening, dark clouds bank against the western horizon and a stiff wind blows. In the morning the fields are covered with snow. Winter has made its first appearance.

Time to Plan. There will be time to listen to the radio, to enjoy a good book, to attend some agricultural meetings and make plans for another year. Such things to do as ordering supplies of seed, fertilizer and chemicals for weed and insect control. At this point we would like to remind our readers that Line Elevator Agents will once again be assisting the Provincial Crop Improvement Associations in the distribution of Registered and Certified Seed. Your local Line Elevator Agent is ready and willing at all times to encourage the use of pure seed, since he knows that higher yields and better grades are bound to result.

After these autumn days, the farmer will have time for thought and leisure, time to enjoy life a little more and plan for the harvest to come.

Mass was held in Misericordia Church on Sunday, Oct. 9.

Mr. and Mrs. George Michetti had friends and relations attend the baptizing ceremony at their home Sunday. Mr. H. Michetti was godfather and Mrs. H. Michetti godmother. Father Oullett baptized the baby. The proud parents chose the name Barbara Lynn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Marta were in the city for a few days.

Mr. B. Meardi was in Edmonton over the week-end.

Threshing is practically over and all we see now is grain trucks and seed buyers zooming around here.

Citizens of Hylo attended the funeral on Thursday of one of our most beloved friend and neighbor, Mrs. S. Grandinetti. Loved by all we were deeply grieved to hear of her death. She passed away after a long illness. She is survived by her loving husband, daughter Donnie and son Micheal and family. Our deepest sympathies are extended to them.

HYLO.—Hylo Intermediate and High School classes were closed on Thursday, Oct. 6 in memory of the late Mrs. S. Grandinetti, mother of one of the high school girls, Donnie.

Mrs. B. Meardi made a brief trip to Edmonton for a visit with her dentist, so the Intermediate classroom was closed both Thursday and Friday. This certainly made an extended Thanksgiving holiday.

Mrs. John Coli's sister Eileen, and her fiance visited Mr. and Mrs. John Coli over the Thanksgiving holiday. Miss E. Bolek liked it here very well and said that she would return during Armistice holiday to spend her vacation with her sister on the farm.

A number of people attended the whist drive which was held in the Venice Parish hall for the Venice church. Everyone expressed with satisfaction that they got their quarter's worth of fun.

Ladies' Altar Society Is Organized

HYLO.—The Ladies' Altar Society for the Misericordia Church of Hylo was organized on Sunday, Oct. 3. Rev. Fr. Oulette introduced the statutes of the society to the ladies and explained the aim to work for.

Nominations and elections followed and the following officials were elected by acclamation: Mrs. Sylvia Grandinetti, president; Mrs. Eva Lozinski, vice-president; Mrs. B. Meardi, secretary-treasurer.

During the business meeting the society officials of the Venice Altar Society guided the planning of the bazaar, which was the current topic.

After adjournment of the meeting Rev. Fr. Oulette urged the officers of both altar societies to maintain a feeling of goodwill since both were working for one parish, namely the Hylo-Venice Parish.

A brief choir practice with Mr. Krecheck from Venice at the organ, concluded the day. The ladies showed a definite iniative. More practice is definitely needed hence possibly every Sunday one will be held.

Redwater Oilfields Celebrates Birthday

Redwater, Canada's greatest oil field, celebrated its first birthday on October 3.

The field covers almost 23,000 acres of proven oil-bearing land. The figure may be increased by several thousand acres should the Imperial summons No. 1 wildcat, three and a half miles southeast of the field's current limits, becomes a good producer. The well if successful, could be an extension of the Redwater field, on the start of a new oil pool. It topped the D3 oil-bearing reef 190 feet above the water line of the Redwater field. Imperial ran two drillstem tests at the well, both showing oil.

Redwater's proven oil reserves has been estimated at at least 360,000,000 barrels. The field now has 189 producers with another 20 assured of production.

At present, Imperial Oil Limited, the discoverer, has 47 Redwater wells on production, Western Leaseholds Limited 39, Canadian Gulf 21, Royalite 17, Pacific Petroleums and Associates 16, the British American - Hudson's Bay team also has 16, Amerada Petroleum Corporation 10, the Anglo-Canadian-Home Oil team 11, the Barnsdall-Honolulu-Seaboard-Los Nietos group 8 and the Texaco-McColl Frontenac team five wells.

In Redwater land sales so far the Alberta Government, which owns the majority of oil rights, has sold 6,070 acres, swelling the Government coffers by $16,216,-093.51 by means of cash bonuses.

Average daily crude oil and natural gasoline production in Alberta is still on the increase. Figures released by the Petroleum and Natural Gas Conservation Board show that the new record is now 70,343 barrels per day set during the week of Sept. 26. This figure tops that of Sept. 19 by 1,380 barrels per day.

Imperial Oil Limited has announced that, effective Oct. 1, they will cut acceptance from wells in the Edmonton region oilfields. This reduction will affect both Imperial wells and wells owned by other companies who sell to Imperial.

The new quotas are as follows: Redwater wells, 100 barrels daily, Leduc and Woodbend D3 wells, 85 barrels a day, Leduc and Woodbend D2 zone and Lower Cretaceous wells, 60 barrels per day, and Golden Spike, 250 barrels daily. In September, Imperial accepted 135 barrels per day from the Redwater wells, 115 barrels daily from Leduc and Woodbend D3 wells, 80 barrels a day from Leduc-Woodbend D2 and Lower Cretaceous wells, and 325 barrels per day from Golden Spike.

Calmar West Oils has completed its Calmar West No. 2 well in the D2 zone and is starting its third. The No. 2 well was bottomed at 5,199 feet, treated with 5,-000 gallons of acid, and is flowing at the rate of 50 barrels a day on a one-hour test. Calmar West No. 3, a quarter mile south of No. 2 and three-quaretrs of a mile southeast of the No. 1 success, has been staked in 11-31-49-26w4th, in the southwest corner of the field.

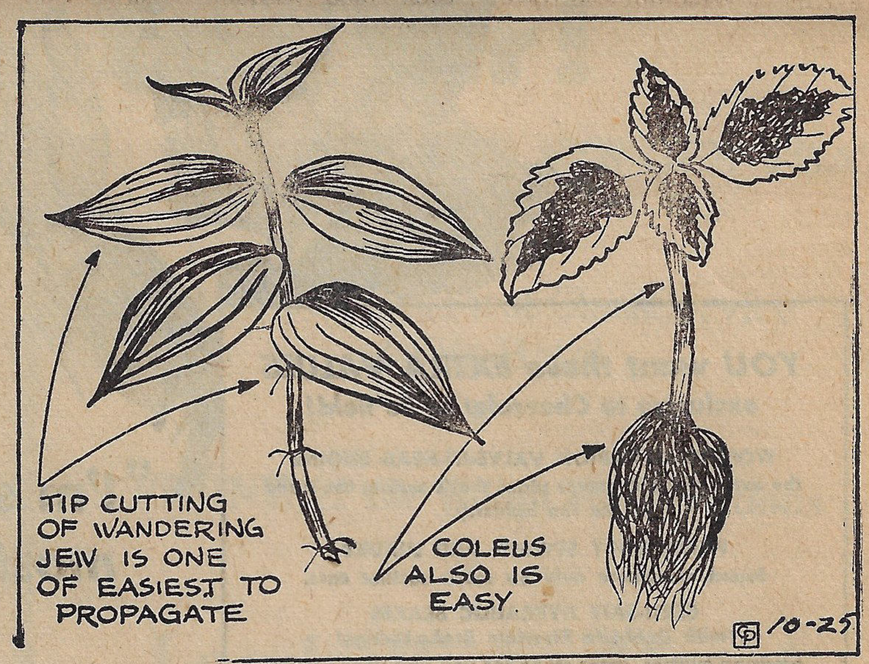

The Albertan's Stettler correspondent reports that the British Empire Development Company will soon start drilling at a well staked by them four miles southwest of that town. The British Empire well is located two miles south of the Redwater Leasehold-Leduc Calmar Stettler No. 4 location.

Killam and Strome Men at 'Boomtown'

REDWATER. — This biggest of all Alberta hamlets, that hasn't even got the status of a village, though its population is variously estimated at between 1,500 and 3,000, boasts of residents from many other Alberta points.

The village of Killam seems to have contributed its share to the growth of Redwater, with sons of Village Secretary Bert Hayward "roughnecking" it for Commonwealth Drilling Co.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Weeks (Mrs. Weeks the former Joyce Norton); George Schulman, Lloyd Ball and Bill Stecik are here. There are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Erickson, Louis Bergeson and Norman Jones. Norm was barbering at Killam two or three years ago. He, along with Ken Watkins, formerly of Strome, is working with Canada West Drilling Company.

So it seems, that although drillers at Killam haven't found oil, Killam and Strome men at Redwater are finding it in abundance.

Students Canvass For Funds

REDWATER. — Ufford Students' executive has started a campaign for funds towards sports equipment. The teachers, in turn with a member of the executive are calling on the many companies and businesses for financial help to start their program of sports.

More and extra sports equipment is needed for the large enrollment and to date, the businessmen and companies, realizing the worthiness of the cause, are responding most generously.

WANDERING RIVER NEWS

By HENRY T. THOMPSON

WANDERING RIVER—A battle which has kept the Wandering River district in a turmoil for the last four weeks over the location of the Wandering River highway has culminated in a draw. Delegations and petitions have flooded the time and patience of the officials concerned with the result that the road crew working on the location chosen by the engineer at St. Paul, pulled them out of the district till the dust settles.

The cool weather has probably tempered the sizzling heat of this district storm, which in my timid opinion was really a tempest in a tea kettle.

For years this district has suffered in patient forbearance with the miseries and hardships of reallly bad roads, too busy and industrious to organize or voice their beef and when they really got going, things just went wild.

Unfortunately their leaders failed to incorporate their forces in one co-ordinated drive, but each side presented different angles although their objective is really the same, namely an outlet of the best and shortest distance to the highway, markets and the railway.

In a vital question of this kind, the majority benefit is the right one. Under an unorganized improvement district, the engineer has all the power and control that the council of a municipal district has in their elected capacity. Therefore his decision may be influenced but certainly can not be controlled or forced by any section in one district that may be detrimental to another part. His judgment must of necessity be the broad one of the majority benefit and must co-ordinate with plans to fit in with the future growth of that particular district as well as districts adjacent.

Further the public works department supply him with information and material to aid him in his work as engineer and their chosen servant that is not available to the general public in much the same way as your elected council deliberate their problems in the municipal districts.

The Public Works branch of the government is doing business for you under the Improvement District set up and when that organization outlives its usefulness, we can at our pleasure organize ourselves into a Municipal District and take over the business of building roads through elected councilors. Perhaps we should do so, that is up to you.

I am advised that the road crew will again be returned to the district and a power grader has already been sent in to repair the Breynet road. However the season is getting short and a great deal can not be expected at this late time. I will be pleased to receive any written comments or criticism at Box 100, Lac la Biche.

When no dew follows a hot day, rain may be expected.

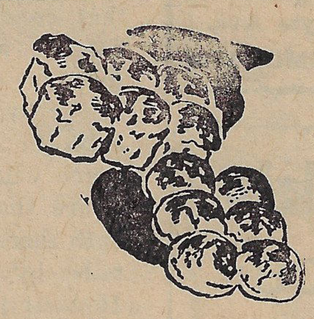

A cluster of bananas is called a hand.

I wish to thank the party very kindly for turning my keys in to the post office.

MORBID INTEREST IN PARIS TRIALS

(Fourth Installment of the "Strangest Murder Case on Record")

The first Paris trial opened at St. John on September 29, 1921, before Mr. Justice Barry.

It is an inetresting sidelight that on the front page of the St. John Daily Telegraph of Sept. 29, there were three murder stories. The fact that the Paris trial had opened was only mentioned on a back page.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's trial for the murder of Virgina Rappe (the charge later being reduced to manslaughter and of which he was acquitted) was of far greater interest. This was the case celebre of the decade and the evidence in the trial of the film comedian ran parallel with the Paris case in the newspapers of the Maritimes for some days.

"MORBID INTEREST"

The presiding judge remarked of the Paris case, however: "The proceedings in this session . . . are arousing more than the usual morbid interest." A murder trial was unusual in St. John but none suspected at this date how unusual this case would prove to be.

In reading the accounts of the trials over 28 years later it is difficult to see how so many people on one side or the other obviously must have been wrong.

It is easy to understand that people might become confused on certain points, even on essential points and it is also easy to understand how one or two persons might imagine they saw something they did not see; how a whole procession of people could take their oath that they had seen a man at a certain place at a certain time and just as many more swear that he was many miles away at the same time is puzzling.

CONFLICT OF EVIDENCE

The murder occurred on Aug. 2. All evidence pointed directly to that conclusion, and Crown and defence apparently accepted the fact as established. Crown witnesses swore that Paris was in St. John on Aug. 2 and 3, while defence witnesses just as positively swore that he was in Truro on both those days, a distance of 240 miles by rail, and at that time a 10 hour train journey at least.

Witnesses on both sides, in most cases, knew Paris for years. If Paris had a double—a remote possibility at the best and not seriously suggested by either side at any time—he certainly was uncannily aware of Paris' affairs from the testimony of those who claimed to have talked with him at both places on the same date.

PARIS DEFENCE

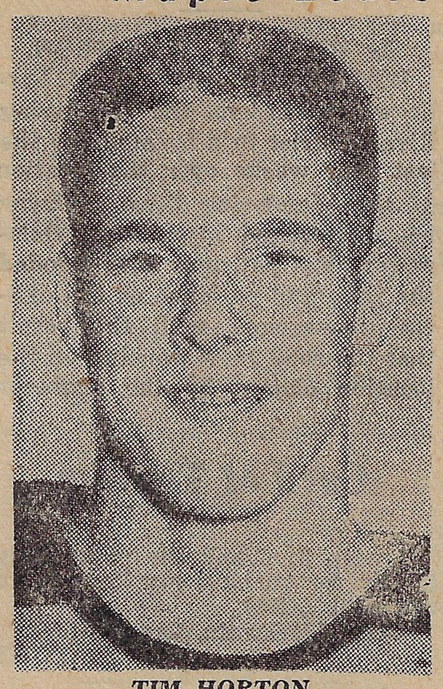

The defence was that Paris could not have committed the murder because he was in Truro on the day, and two following days after the murder took place in St. John. Paris himself testified—he took the stand at all five trials—that he went to Truro from St. John on July 24, and did not return until Aug. 4.

Crown witnesses asserted that Paris was in St. John on Aug. 2 and Aug. 3. They placed the dates because there was a large fire on the night of Aug. 2, near where they and Paris lived. On the other hand the Truro people in more than one instance had documentary evidence of the date on which an event occurred at which Paris was present.

Signed Three-Year Contract with Toronto Maple Leafs

TIM HORTON
—Central Press Canadian

Termed as "the No. 1 defence prospect in Canada," rough and ready Tim Horton signed a three-year contract on Monday with Toronto Maple Leafs. The bashing rearguard of last season's St. Michael's College Majors, Toronto, will report to the Pittsburgh Hornets training camp in Welland, Ont., on Wednesday. Horton, who won't be 20 until next January, was born in Cochrane, Ont. He played hockey at public and high school in Cochrane and Sudbury, and with Sudbury and Copper Cliff in the N.O.H.A.

Beef By Air

Cattle droving over long distances is one of the main difficulties of the Australian livestock man. But a partial answer has been found in the northwestern part of Australia by taking to the air.

An abattoir has been erected on one of the livestock stations with a mobile killing plant and refrigeration facilities. Here the cattle are slaughtered and the chilled beef flown to the northern port of Wyndham about 190 miles distant.

The method eliminates many weeks of road travel with consequent loss of condition. It has already been demonstrated that about 20 per cent more meat can be delivered in this manner, all of which is of first-class quality. These advantages, it is claimed, more than compensate for the increased cost of air freight, without increasing the price to the consumer.

The plan has met with such initial success that its extension to other isolated cattle raising areas of Australia is contemplated.

Hunters and fishermen are cautioned by Red Cross Water Safety Instructors to make sure they can remove waders and heavy garments quickly for it is very difficult to swim with extra weight.

Chili Recipes From "Canada's Kitchen"

Cabinet ministers and office boys, stenographers and livestock experts, in fact all the civil servants who work in the majestic Confederation Building in Ottawa, have been meeting with tantalizing odors as they enter the Wellington Street structure these fall days.

The aromas have been emanating from the immaculate little white room in the basement, dubbed "Canada's Kitchen," where home economists of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, have been experimenting with new ways of making that favorite relish, chili sauce.

And the economists of the kitchen have come up with some ideas. Uncooked Chili is one. It is actually an uncooked pickle. Another one can be cooked either on top of the stove or in the oven, a feature that keeps it out of the way and requires stirring only towards the last hour of cooking.

The recipes, complete with advice and ideas, are available on request from the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

An Old Flower

Crhysanthemums were probably first cultivated in China and introduced from there to Japan in the eighth century. It was not until the end of the seventeenth century that they seem to have been grown in Europe.

In 1690 six varieties were grown in Holland, but they appear to have been allowed to die out, for they were not heard of in Europe until about one hundred years later. In 1780 three varieties were introduced into France ,and one of these found its way to England.

During the next twenty years a number of varieties came to England direct from China and Japan, and in 1830 the first all-chrysanthemum flower show was held in that country. Varieties now available are numbered in the thousands and new ones are added to the list every year.

Threshes 60 Bushels and 15 lbs. Per Acre

WANDERING RIVER.—George Franchuk, farmer at Wandering River district, threshed on a 19-acre crop of breaking at the rate of 60 bushels and 15 lbs. per acre elevator measure. His average for the whole 70 acres which included 10 acres of spring plowing was 39 and 40 pounds per acre.

This we consider a record for these parts and certainly one that will take some beating for the province.

WHY WORRY!

There are only two causes for worry! Either you are successful or you are not successful. If you are successful there is nothing to worry about. If you are not successful there are only two things to worry about; either you are in good health or you are sick. If you are in good health there is nothing to worry about, and if you are sick, there are only two things to worry about; either you are going to get better or you are going to die. If you are going to get better there is nothing to nothing to worry about, and if you die, there are only two things to worry about; either you will go to heaven, or you won't go to heaven. If you go to heaven there is nothing to worry about, and if you go to the other place, you will be so busy shaking hands with old friends that you won't have time to worry. So—why worry?
